Adobe has announced Project ROME for Education! Available as a pilot program for school districts, Project ROME for Education lets students and educators express, collaborate and communicate ideas using graphics, photos, text, video, audio and animation in a simple, unified content creation and publishing environment. It is ideal for large school districts that want to use digital media as part of their 21st Century learning and skills development efforts. The goal with Project ROME for Education is to help enhance the teaching and learning experience. You can use it to create content that helps convey complex topics more visually, or use as an ideation and collaboration platform with other teachers and students. Adobe is offering a pilot program for Project ROME for Education. Go to <http://rome.adobe.com/education> to test Project ROME
